The Indian's Prayer

O Great Spirit, Whose voice I hear in the winds and whose breath gives life to all the world,

Hear me! I am small and weak I need your strength and wisdom.

Let me walk in beauty and make my eyes ever behold the red and purple sunset.

Make my hands respect the things you have made and my ears sharp to hear your voice.

Tell me the lessons you have hidden in every leaf and rock.

I seek strength, not to be greater than my brothers and sisters, but to fight my greatest enemy—myself.

Make me always ready to come to you with clean hands and straight eyes;

So when life fades, as the fading sunset, my spirit may come to you without shame.

Don't take yourself too seriously.
No one else does

In Peter's dreams
the cock still crowed.
He returned to Galilee to throw nets into the sea and watch them sink like memories into the darkness.
He did not curse the sun that rolled down his back or the wind that drove the fish beyond his nets.
He only waited for the morning when the shore mist would lift and from his boat he would see him.
Then after a naked and impetuous swim with the sea running from his eyes he would find a cook with holes in his hands and stooped over dawn coals who would offer him the Kingdom of God for breakfast.
