Teach us, Lord, to pray;
you taught your closest friends
that new and living way which doubt and fear transcends:
to seek your wise and just commands and trust life to your gracious hands.

Your touch has still its power to startle to new life
relationships made sour
of children, husband, wife:
in workplace and in neighbourhood to turn the evil into good.

You can reach out to bless
the lost and lonely soul;
in sickness and distress
your touch can make life whole;
we turn to you, all incomplete,
and lay our weakness at your feet.

We gamble on your grace, knowing your entering in
may fond desires displace
a larger gain to win:
to do your will our lives are sent
and in that will we'll rest content.
