Parent to Teacher

I bring to you my little child;
Till now he had been wholly mine.
I must recede and share with you,
In teaching him - a task divine.

If I should over-anxious seem,
Forgive me - for I love him so;
And 'tis my very life to me
The things that bring him weal or woe.

Till now the things I said and did
Were held by him as right and true.
Now he will look to you for help,
And quote to me the things you do.

I know that you can teach him books,
No thought of that I need to give.
But answer me this question please;
"O will you teach him how to live?"
